COMPUTER AIDED ASSESSMENT OF MATHEMATICS

OUP Oxford Assessment is a key driver in mathematics education. This book examines computer aided assessment (CAA) of mathematics in which computer algebra systems (CAS) are used to establish the mathematical properties of expressions provided by students in response to questions. In order to automate such assessment, the relevant criteria must be encoded and, in articulating precisely the desired criteria, the teacher needs to think very carefully about the goals of the task. Hence CAA acts as a vehicle to examine assessment and mathematics education in detail and from a fresh perspective. One example is how it is natural for busy teachers to set only those questions that can be marked by hand in a straightforward way, even though the constraints of paper-based formats restrict what they do and why. There are other kinds of questions, such as those with non-unique correct answers, or where assessing the properties requires the marker themselves to undertake a significant computation. It is simply not sensible for a person to set these to large groups of students when marking by hand. However, such questions have their place and value in provoking thought and learning. This book, aimed at teachers in both schools and universities, explores how, in certain cases, different question types can be automatically assessed. Case studies of existing systems have been included to illustrate this in a concrete and practical way.

YOUR INFLUENCING INSTINCTS

---

---

---

100 QUESTIONS TO TEST THEM - 100 ANSWERS TO IMPROVE THEM

---

Test and improve your influencing instincts with this unique collection of 100 multiple-choice questions. They draw on Ray Lancaster's four decades as a passionate tester, practitioner and teacher-trainer of influence factors, principles and techniques. Ray has either tested them, used them or taught them in all his professional positions since the early 1980s. Recently retired as a training programme director at Nestlé's international training centre in Switzerland, he remains active as a communication trainer in a private school and as a speaker on this topic. Why should you read "Your influencing instincts"? Influence in its countless forms has become an industry. Books, research papers, websites, magazines, blogs, videos, courses and discussion groups abound. Most explore the workings of one or several types of influence and offer useful guidance, but none offers an easy-to-use, wide-ranging self-assessment tool like "Your influencing instincts". Whether you're simply curious about your influencing instincts or intend to use them for your own (hopefully ethical) purposes, this book is designed to engage and surprise you at every turn. No prior knowledge of influence techniques or influence research is necessary. Each of the 100 questions offers four possible answers, only one of which is correct. Once you've found the correct answer, Ray discusses it in terms of influence-related research and what he calls "The 3Cs of Why". These are three fundamental human needs that we all share: our need for control, our need for connection and our need for consistency. The 3Cs of Why not only drive what people think, feel, say, decide and do, but may also be used as a set of powerful influencing levers. Even professionals whose careers depend on their ability to influence rarely answer more than half of Ray's test questions correctly at their first attempt. Can you do better?

PUTTING THEORY INTO PRACTICE

---

Routledge This collection brings together research on learning-oriented language assessment from scholars working across geographic and educational contexts, highlighting the opportunities of assessment practices which seek to better align assessment and learning tasks and support effective learning. The volume begins by introducing learning-oriented assessment (LOA) and the context around its growing popularity, especially in accountability-oriented settings which favor summative large-scale tests. The first part of the book charts the development of LOA's theoretical and conceptual underpinnings, outlining the ways in which they have been informed by theories of learning and key elements. The second part demonstrates LOA in practice, drawing on examples from different countries and instructional settings to explore such topics as the role of technology in LOA and developing feedback materials based around LOA principles and developed for core literacy skills. Offering a holistic view of learning-oriented assessment and the real-world affordances and challenges of its implementation, this book is key reading for graduate students, researchers, and practitioners in language testing and assessment, TESOL, and language education.
