

Cover Story

What do the parties have in store?

Cover Story The election 2015 – What do the parties have in store?

The general election is drawing near, but under which party will UK education be better off? Sue Hackman reviews the many policies and promises related to schooling.

p20

REGULARS

Editorial 1

Our manifesto

Points 6

One in five education staff has had a false allegation made against them by a pupil; Children's brain development could be adversely affected by poverty; Teachers should ignore rules on promoting 'fundamental British values'; and more.

Trends 10

Could a greater focus on RE in schools help make young people less vulnerable to religious radicalisation?

Report Update 14

Our regular digest of important new documents and studies for school teachers.

FEATURES

Promoting positive mental health in schools 26

Mental ill health often begins in adolescence, which, says Louise Kinnaird, puts schools in the ideal position to identify and support the children most at risk. Here's how.

The road to resilience 34

A major facet of good mental health is the ability to bounce back when adversity strikes. Tina Rae considers how to support young people in developing this vital skill.

When teens take risks 40

It can be a great concern to teachers when a young person's behaviour puts themselves and others at risk. But a new schools-based programme is empowering teens to identify and avoid dangerous risk-taking behaviour. Simon Legrand reports.

Securing robust assessment under the new curriculum 47

Securing a rigorous alternative to the defunct NC levels is a challenge, but not unachievable when built upon solid foundations. Ann O'Hara identifies the key components of successful, sustainable assessment.

Rethinking the future of school leadership 57

Beliefs about what constitutes effective school leadership have remained largely unaffected for many years. Libby Nicholas and John West-Burnham think it's time for a new model – and a radical one at that.

Why do children bully? 68

Elizabeth Nassem and Ann Harris examine the reasons some children pick on others, and highlight a few tried-and-tested ways teachers and pupils can work together to end bullying in schools.

The law on force 74

All members of school staff have the legal power to use reasonable force. But what is reasonable force, and in what kind of situations does this power come into play? Andy Maddocks explains.

PRIMARY FILEDecoding the new computing curriculum 80

It came into force back in September, but for most schools, developing a full, vibrant computing curriculum will take some time yet. Jason Chahal shares his experiences preparing to meet the challenge.

Literacy learning through crochet 86

Kathleen Hunter describes what happened when she introduced crochet to a class of disadvantaged eight-year-olds in the US – and its surprising benefits in a range of curriculum areas.

Manager's Briefcase – Managing the use of force in schools 93

Resources and guidance to plan, manage and minimise the use of force in schools.

Editorial Office*Editor

Howard Sharron

PRODUCTION EDITOR

Maisie Gould

DESIGN MANAGER

Devinder Sonsana

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

0121 224 7590/91

MARKETING DEPARTMENT

0121 224 7580

CUSTOMER SERVICES

0121 224 7599

Company registration number 02445043

© School Leadership Today 2015

ISSN 2040-1310

No part of this publication may be reproduced, copied or transmitted in any form or by any means.

School Leadership Today is an independent magazine. The views expressed in signed articles do not necessarily represent those of the magazine.

The magazine cannot accept any responsibility for products and services advertised within it.

Contact us

School Leadership Today is published by Imaginative Minds, 309 Scott House, Gibb Street, Birmingham, B9 4DT

- Tel. 0121 224 7599
- Fax. 0121 224 7598
- www.teachingtimes.com