Overcoming the Allure of Toxic Leadership

The directive leadership style being promoted in the current economic-based educational climate is failing to develop individual worth, experience and the professionalism of staff. Ian Craig presses us to reconsider what leadership is about. p. 42

REGULARS

Editorial 1

It's Official – Ofsted Will Soon become Schizophrenic

Points 4

Linking the curriculum to careers requires a focus on skills not subjects, unions mobilise after disastrous budget, excluded children destined for gangs, and more.

Trends 8

Ofsted – Making Sense of the Changes

Ofsted is changing its inspection framework from 2019 to focus more on teaching quality and less on exam results. We outline what this means.

Report Update 11

Our regular digest of important new documents and studies for school teachers.

FEATURES

18 Autism – Difference, not Deficit

Although autism spectrum behaviours are diverse and individual to the student, there are some simple ways to understand and offer support. Bob Lowndes offers advice and tips.

26 Questioning and Reflecting – Becoming a Learning-Centred Leader

Becoming a successful leader who can really impact on learning involves helping teachers set up reflective practices. Peter Dudley outlines what it takes to be learning-centred and effective.

32 Mapping Thinking Across a Trust

Want to find out how your students are thinking? Hanna Miller shows how implementing Thinking Maps throughout a Trust's schools is having profound and unexpected results.

38 Empowering Leadership – What it Is and When it Works

Are your staff actually being empowered to be actively involved in their jobs or are they being overburdened by the demands? Allen Lee shows how do find the balance in your leadership style.

50 Reinventing the School – Kingsley Leadership Academy and Education of the Future

How can we give Gen-Z students the necessary skills to be the leaders of tomorrow? Arthur Carnazzi shows how a new leadership academy has reimagined high school education that is relevant to students' lives and is allowing them to contribute meaningfully to changing the world.

56 Talking to Learn

If children do not develop their language skills, their thought processes will be impeded. Heather Clements shares ideas for helping students develop communication skills as well as knowledge.

64 Upping the Ante on Teacher Training The Virtual Classroom That's Just for Teachers

Do you ever wish you could practise before trying out new material or starting with a new class? Lorna Burrows from Immersive VR shows how new VR technology is helping teachers develop their craft at the highest level.

70 It Doesn't Have to Be Like This – Advocating for Our Children

Sir Al Aynsley-Green compares the current situation in the UK with other countries, trying to discover why there is such a difference in educational outcomes. He's convinced that we can and must all work together to improve the future.
